

VELUSE AGENCY STANDARD OPERATING PROCEDURE (SOP) DEPARTMENT: Client Success & Retention Architecture SUBJECT: The "Turkey Talk" Expectation Setting Script & The 30-Day Protocol PURPOSE: To establish Veluse Agency's militant protocol for onboarding high-ticket Enterprise Med Spa clients. The moment a $10K-$90K contract is signed, the client is highly vulnerable to buyer's remorse. Customers usually decide whether or not they like your business within the first 48 hours after the sale 1, 2. If we do not aggressively control their timeline expectations, they will demand overnight results and churn operationally. This SOP utilizes the "Turkey Talk" analogy to neutralize impatience, reset delivery timelines, and mathematically eliminate early churn 3, 4.

PART 1: THE ORIGIN OF THE "TURKEY TALK"

The "Turkey Talk" is an expectation-setting framework derived from a highly successful tanning salon pricing model 3. The salon owner would run an attraction offer for a five-day tanning pass for just $5, knowing that consumers falsely believe they can get a perfect tan in five days 3.

When the customer walked in and stated they wanted to get a few shades darker immediately, the owner would deliver the "Turkey Talk." He explained that if a turkey takes three hours to cook, you cannot just get it done in half the time by doubling the heat—you will burn it 3. He would explain that tanning works the exact same way; attempting to speed things up will only cause a burn 3. After delivering this reality check, he would easily upsell them into an unlimited monthly membership 3.

We must weaponize this exact logic. For Veluse Agency, if we attempt to rush an AI-booking bot deployment or force the Meta algorithm to spend thousands of dollars on Day 1, we do not get faster results; we burn the ad budget and the local market. By deliberately lowering their expectations regarding the speed of the initial rollout, we actually increase their perceived likelihood of achievement because our timeline sounds realistic and honest 4.

PART 2: THE $10K+ ONBOARDING SCRIPT (WORD-FOR-WORD)

This script is mandatory for the Veluse Customer Success (CS) team to execute on the kickoff call immediately following a closed deal. It is designed to verbally reaffirm their decision, introduce the Turkey Talk analogy, and establish a rigid timeline that prevents 30-day panic.

Phase 1: The Re-Affirmation & Anchor "Client Name, first of all, congratulations on making this investment. I want to verbally affirm that you made an incredibly smart decision for your Med Spa today.

Right now, you are probably feeling a mix of massive excitement and a little bit of nervousness. That is completely normal. But my job as your Success Director is to ensure that we completely transform your infrastructure so you never have to worry about lead flow again."

Phase 2: The Turkey Talk (Resetting Timeline Expectations) "Now, before we deploy our AI-booking bots and launch your ad campaigns, we need to have what I call the 'Turkey Talk.'

If a turkey takes three hours to cook in an oven, you cannot get it done in an hour and a half by just doubling the heat. If you try to rush it and double the heat, you don't get a faster dinner—you just burn the turkey 3.

Building a world-class AI infrastructure works the exact same way. If we try to force the system to launch before it is fully trained on your specific Med Spa's pricing and FAQs, we will burn your local audience and waste your ad budget."

Phase 3: The 30-Day Buffer"So, here is the reality of the timeline. For the next 14 to 21 days, you are going to feel like we are moving slow. We are going to let the turkey cook at the right temperature 3. We do this so that by Day 30, when we flip the switch, the system operates flawlessly, your front desk isn't overwhelmed, and your calendar fills up with highly qualified patients."

Phase 4: BAMFAM (Book A Meeting From A Meeting)"Does that timeline and process make sense to you? Are we aligned on cooking this the right way?

Wait for prospect to agree.

Perfect. At Veluse Agency, we never leave a customer in no man's land; you should always know exactly what happens next 5, 6. So, before we hang up, we operate on a rule called BAMFAM: Book A Meeting From A Meeting 6-8. I want to schedule our integration review call for exactly 7 days from today. Does Tuesday at 2:00 PM or Wednesday at 10:00 AM work better for you?"

PART 3: THE FIRST 30 DAYS (RULES OF ENGAGEMENT)

To mathematically eliminate operational churn, the Veluse CS team must execute the following non-negotiable protocols during the first 30 days:

1. The Handshake, Not the Handoff:We do not simply "hand off" a $90K client. We execute a "handshake" with Customer Success 9. The sales rep must introduce the onboarding specialist and ensure all information gets passed like a baton, so the prospect never has to repeat their goals, fears, or aspirations 9.

2. The 48-Hour Over-Communication Protocol:If there is ever a time to invest maximum resources into a customer, it is in the first 24, 48, and 72 hours 10. Send a personalized video from the CEO or founder welcoming them aboard and detailing exactly what happens tomorrow 2, 11. We must over-communicate in this window so they know exactly who is going to talk to them and what time they need to show up 10.

3. Pad Timelines by 50%:Never expect customers to forgive you 6. Therefore, we mandate adding 50% to all of our delivery timelines 6. If an AI integration takes 10 days, we tell the Med Spa it takes 15 days. This ensures we always deliver early; making "on time" for us look like "early" for them 6. This establishes immediate, unbreakable trust.