

VELUSE AGENCY STANDARD OPERATING PROCEDURE (SOP)DEPARTMENT: Client Success & Retention ArchitectureSUBJECT: The "Turkey Talk" Expectation Setting ScriptPURPOSE: To establish Veluse Agency's militant protocol for onboarding high-ticket enterprise clients. The moment a Med Spa owner signs a $10,000+ contract, their initial excitement rapidly turns into fear, triggering severe buyer's remorse where they second-guess their investment 1. If we do not aggressively control their timeline expectations in the first 24 to 72 hours, they will demand overnight results and operationally churn 1, 2. This SOP utilizes the "Turkey Talk" analogy to completely neutralize impatience, reset expectations, and guarantee long-term retention.

PART 1: THE ORIGIN OF THE "TURKEY TALK"

The "Turkey Talk" is an expectation-setting framework derived from a highly successful tanning salon pricing model 3. The salon owner would run an attraction offer for a five-day tanning pass for just $5, knowing that consumers falsely believe they can get a perfect tan in five days 3.

When the customer walked in and stated they wanted to get a few shades darker immediately, the owner would deliver the "Turkey Talk": he explained that if a turkey takes three hours to cook, you cannot simply get it done in half the time by doubling the heat—you will just burn the turkey 3. He would explain that tanning works the exact same way; attempting to rush the process will only cause a burn 3. After delivering this reality check, he would seamlessly pivot and offer them a 12-month unlimited membership for $20 a month, effectively upselling them because they realized the cheap, fast option would not yield the result they actually desired 3, 4.

We must weaponize this exact logic. The first impressions you make and the expectations you set fundamentally dictate the long-term relationship 5. Customer expectations are incredibly fickle, which is why we must set them ourselves 6. By deliberately lowering their expectations regarding the speed of the initial rollout, we create operational breathing room to overdeliver 6.

PART 2: THE $10K+ ONBOARDING SCRIPT (WORD-FOR-WORD)

This script is mandatory for the Veluse Customer Success team to read on the kickoff call immediately following a closed $10K+ Med Spa deployment. It is designed to verbally re-affirm their decision, introduce the Turkey Talk analogy, and establish a rigid timeline that prevents 30-day panic 7.

Phase 1: The Re-Affirmation & Anchor*"Client Name, first of all, congratulations on making this investment. I want to verbally affirm that you made an incredibly smart decision for your Med Spa today.*

Right now, you are probably feeling a mix of massive excitement and a little bit of nervousness about spending $10,000. That is completely normal. But my job as your Success Director is to ensure that we completely transform your booking infrastructure so you never have to worry about lead flow again.

Phase 2: The Turkey Talk (Resetting Timeline Expectations)Now, before we deploy our AI-booking bots and launch your ad campaigns, we need to have what I call the 'Turkey Talk.'

If a turkey takes three hours to cook in an oven, you cannot get it done in an hour and a half by just doubling the heat 3. If you try to rush it and double the heat, you don't get a faster dinner—you just burn the turkey 3.

Building a world-class AI infrastructure works the exact same way. Many agency clients expect that the day after they hand over their credit card, their calendar will magically be booked solid with 50 high-ticket appointments. But if we try to force the Meta algorithm to spend thousands of dollars on day one, or if we launch the AI bot before it is fully trained on your specific Med Spa's pricing and FAQs, we will burn your local audience and waste your ad budget.

Phase 3: The 30-Day Buffer*So, here is the reality of the timeline. For the next 14 to 21 days, you are going to feel like we are moving slow. We will be quietly building your VSLs, integrating your CRM, and training the machine learning models on your offers. You will not see a massive spike in revenue tomorrow.*

We are going to let the turkey cook at the right temperature. We do this so that by Day 30, when we flip the switch, the system operates flawlessly, your front desk isn't overwhelmed with broken tech, and your calendar fills up with highly qualified patients.

Phase 4: BAMFAM (Book A Meeting From A Meeting)Does that timeline and process make sense to you? Are we aligned on cooking this the right way?

Wait for prospect to agree.

Perfect. At Veluse Agency, we never leave you in no man's land; you should always know exactly what happens next 8. So, before we hang up, we operate on a rule called BAMFAM: Book A Meeting From A Meeting 8. I want to schedule our integration review call for exactly 7 days from today. Does Tuesday at 2:00 PM or Wednesday at 10:00 AM work better for you?

PART 3: THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THE DEPLOYMENT

By executing this script word-for-word, Veluse Agency accomplishes three critical operational goals:

1. Eliminates the Time Delay Panic: By explicitly telling them the first three weeks will feel slow, we remove their anxiety when nothing immediately happens. We dictate the narrative so that "slow" is perceived as "methodical and safe," rather than "incompetent."
2. Kills the 30-Day Refund Request: Because they have verbally agreed to the "Turkey Talk" analogy, they cannot logically demand a refund on day 15 complaining about a lack of leads. We have pre-framed the first 30 days as a necessary building phase.
3. Manufactures Trust Through Precision: We never expect a customer to forgive us 8. Therefore, we add padding to our timelines 8. If we tell them it takes 21 days to build the AI infrastructure, and we deliver it in 14 days, we have successfully overdelivered and made "on time" for us look like "early" for them, generating massive goodwill and paving the way for future upswells 6, 8.