

VELUSE AGENCY STANDARD OPERATING PROCEDURE (SOP) DEPARTMENT:

Revenue Architecture & Enterprise Acquisition SUBJECT: The $100M Launch

Deconstruction & Mega-Event Protocol PURPOSE: To establish Veluse Agency's operational mandate for executing world-class, mega-revenue launch events for our Med Spa AI-infrastructure rollouts and enterprise clients. This SOP reverse-engineers the exact mechanics of Alex Hormozi's $100M Leads and Money Models book launches, which generated 500,000 registrations and over $100 million in sales in a 72-hour window 1-3. We do not rely on hope marketing; we engineer engineered scarcity, gamified affiliate ecosystems, and undeniable live-attendance incentives.

PART 1: THE 500,000 ATTENDEE AFFILIATE LEADERBOARD SYSTEM

To capture massive market share without paying a king's ransom to ad platforms, you must weaponize an affiliate army. During the $100M launch, almost one-third of the 500,000 registrants came entirely from free referrals 1.

The 2-Tier "Everyman & Killer" Reward Structure: An elite affiliate program cannot just reward the top 1% of influencers; it must incentivize the "long tail" of regular people while still motivating the "killers" 4.

- The "Everyman" Tier (10+ Opt-ins): If an affiliate generated just 10 email opt-ins, they received an exclusive audiobook containing 70+ one-minute tactical business lessons 5, 6. They also earned a raffle ticket for one of 50 remaining in-person spots 6. This low barrier to entry mobilized thousands of micro-affiliates to message their group chats and slack channels 6.
- The Top 50 Tier: The top 50 affiliates won an in-person, 3-hour Q&A session at headquarters, allowing them to network and potentially get their specific business questions answered 7, 8.
- The Top 10 "Killers" Tier: The top 10 affiliates won an exclusive, one-on-one fireside chat and dinner 4, 7, 8. This created a massive incentive for the largest influencers to push hard, knowing their audience would click their specific links to submit questions for the fireside chat 9.

Operationalizing the Affiliate Army:

- Plug-and-Play Collateral: We must give affiliates all the pre-approved emails, social posts, and ads so they simply copy and paste 10. You cannot expect them to build their own campaigns 10.
- Daily Leaderboard: Send out the leaderboard as frequently as possible (daily) 11. High-performers check this daily because they are naturally competitive; this acts as a real-time feedback loop driving them to push harder 11.
- Behind-the-Scenes Access: Give affiliates exclusive data on which ads and emails are converting best, allowing them to learn elite marketing tactics from the inside out while promoting your product 11-13.

PART 2: GAMIFICATION & THE "DONATE FOR BONUSES" UPSELL

To drive Average Order Value (AOV) and create a massive halo effect of goodwill, the launch utilized a philanthropic gamification model.

- The 200-Book Bundle: Instead of just selling a product, Hormozi engineered an irresistible offer where purchasing a massive quantity of books (e.g., the 200-book donation bundle) unlocked insane, highly valuable bonuses that took two years to build 14.

- The Halo Effect: Over 3.6 million books were ultimately donated by entrepreneurs 15, 16. By tapping into the mission of making business education accessible, buyers were emotionally and logically incentivized to overpay for the core product because they viewed it as an investment in a cause and their own brand status 15, 17.

PART 3: THE "SECRET PRODUCT" (LIVE ATTENDANCE INCENTIVE)

Getting 500,000 people to register is useless if no one shows up to the actual pitch. To force live attendance, you must manufacture an unmissable, curiosity-driven incentive.

- The Curiosity Hook: In all promotional material, the hook was: "I've got one secret project that I've been working on for over two years that I'll be unveiling live. I can't tell you what it is, but I can tell you that it's better than an NFT, it's less than a Bitcoin, and every single person who shows up live gets one" 18-20.
- The Execution (The Hat): The "secret project" delivered at the live event was actually a high-status physical merchandise drop. He sold physical hats for $100, which functionally covered the cost of giving the books away for free 21. People were willing to pay $100 for a hat because he attached the narrative, status, and meaning of the event to the physical commodity 21.

Veluse Agency Application: When doing a webinar or Med Spa rollout, we must withhold the ultimate bonus and explicitly state: "You only get the custom AI-Booking blueprint if you are on the call live. No replays will receive it."

PART 4: THE 4-WEEK EMAIL & PROMOTIONAL SEQUENCE

To orchestrate this volume of attention without fatiguing the audience, the campaign relied on a strict, escalating communication protocol known as the "Whisper, Tease, Shout" sequence 22-24.

- Week 4 to Week 2 (The Whisper Phase):
 - Think of this as "Call Outs." The goal is pure curiosity 22. Keep the actual product mysterious but hint at the massive scale of what is coming 22.
 - Show behind-the-scenes work (e.g., editing late at night, building the presentation slides) to prove the effort and build the perceived value of the upcoming release 22.
- Week 2 to 3 Days Out (The Tease Phase):
 - Think "Elements of Value." Reveal the product and the exact launch date 23.
 - Start teasing the specific benefits, dream outcomes, and bonuses 23. Tease once per week at first, escalating to twice per week until you are three days out 23.
- 3 Days Out to Launch (The Shout Phase):
 - Think "Call to Action." Shout at least twice a day starting three days out 24.
 - Provide clear, direct instructions to register, pounding the urgency, scarcity, and exclusive live bonuses 24. On the actual day of the launch, email every few hours, escalating to every 30 minutes right before going live 24.

Protecting the Core Email List: To recruit affiliates from his own massive audience without burning out his core list, Hormozi only sent two emails to his general list asking them to become affiliates ("Hey FYI we have this... And by the way in case you missed it that's it") 25. The real outbound effort was directed at his previous year's list of 30,000 affiliates, reaching out directly to ask if they wanted to "run it back" for the new launch 25, 26.
