

VELUSE AGENCY STANDARD OPERATING PROCEDURE (SOP) DEPARTMENT:

Enterprise Acquisition & Experiential Marketing SUBJECT: The Event ROI & Mastermind Playbook

PURPOSE: To establish Veluse Agency's operational mandate for executing high-end, in-person events and Masterminds for Enterprise Med Spa owners. We do not throw events for motivational "rah-rah" energy or cheap ticket profits 1-3. Modeled after Alex Hormozi's elite $5,000 Las Vegas HQ Workshops and his $1M+ investment into the $100M Leads launch, this SOP details how Veluse Agency weaponizes live events as the ultimate retention, qualification, and high-ticket ascension mechanism 4-7.

PART 1: THE ECONOMICS OF THE EVENT (ASCENSION OVER FRONT-END)

Amateur operators view an event as a front-end profit center, trying to squeeze margins out of ticket sales. At Veluse Agency, we recognize that the front-end ticket price is merely a filter, and the true economic engine is the backend ascension 8, 9.

When Hormozi hosted his book launch, he invested over $1 million into the event itself, giving away immense value for free 7. By aggressively over-delivering upfront, the event generated over $100 million in sales within a single weekend 10. Similarly, the Acquisition.com live workshops charge approximately $5,000 for attendance 5, 6. However, the primary financial objective is not the $5,000 ticket; it is the strategic conversion of these qualified attendees into a $35,000 to $90,000+ backend advisory and implementation partnership (VAM Level 2) 11, 12.

The Renewal Mechanism: Furthermore, events are mathematically proven to be the most powerful retention and renewal tool in a business's arsenal. When analyzing subscription and high-ticket retention data, we see that renewals happen at the highest frequency during live, in-person events 13. Instead of letting renewals happen randomly, we choreograph our events to happen regularly (e.g., once a quarter) and utilize them as intentional, hyper-buying windows to secure long-term client retention 13, 14.

PART 2: CURATING THE ROOM (THE "EMPTY ROOM" PRINCIPLE)

The perceived value of a Mastermind or workshop is entirely dependent on the caliber of the other people in the room 15. If we allow low-tier operators into our Veluse Agency events, we destroy our brand equity.

The Strict Qualification Standard: To replicate the Acquisition.com model, we must establish ruthless revenue minimums. Attendees must undergo a qualification call to prove they have the financial capacity and the operational scale (e.g., $3 million to $150 million in annual revenue) to warrant being in the room 16. By enforcing these barriers, we ensure the attendees are sophisticated enough to grasp high-level AI-infrastructure concepts and wealthy enough to afford our backend integration.

The Host Advantage (Letting the Room Do the Work): If you assemble an elite group of Enterprise Med Spa owners, they will inherently provide massive value to one another 15. As the host, you receive a disproportionate amount of the credit for the value they extract from networking 15. We mandate that our executive team actively curates these connections. If we know two owners are dealing with similar expansion constraints, we manually connect them 17. The resulting breakthrough is permanently associated with the Veluse Agency brand, exponentializing our perceived value 18.

PART 3: TACTICAL DISSECTION VS. MOTIVATIONAL FLUFF

Enterprise founders do not pay a premium to feel good; they pay for objective clarity and the elimination of constraints 3, 19.

The "Spotlight" Teardown: During our events, we completely abandon motivational speeches 1, 2. Instead, we implement "Spotlight Sessions." We put a Med Spa owner in the hot seat and publicly dissect their operations, marketing, and sales systems in front of the group 1, 20. We provide a candid, almost ruthless evaluation of their business as an investor would, identifying their exact bottlenecks 2, 3.

Forcing Focus & Trimming Fat: Entrepreneurs constantly overshoot their capacity with too many initiatives 21. Our objective during these sessions is to force the founder to "kill off shit" 19. By making them eliminate unprofitable services and bloated expenses, they often reclaim the exact cost of their event ticket before they even leave the room 19. We then hand them a personalized scaling packet containing exactly 3 to 5 clear, tactical steps tailored to break their primary constraint 22.

PART 4: THE "NO-PITCH" PITCH (THE 15-MINUTE STACK & CLOSE)

There are no half measures in sales: you must either pitch hard or do not pitch at all 23. However, the most effective way to sell high-ticket implementation is to delay the ask until we have deposited an overwhelming amount of goodwill 24, 25.

The Framework for the Event Close:

1. Teach the "How It Works" Conceptually: During the main sessions, give away all the secrets. Teach the Med Spa owners exactly how the AI-infrastructure and high-ticket sales models work 26, 27. By explaining complex mechanics simply, you demonstrate elite competence and they realize the sheer magnitude of the work involved 26.
2. The Meta-Lesson Transition: At the end of the event, after delivering massive value, the lead Veluse executive will take the stage. Hormozi successfully uses the final session to teach a lesson on handling "sales objections," which operates as a brilliant meta-lesson 8, 28, 29. You teach them how to overcome objections in their own business, while simultaneously neutralizing their psychological hesitations about buying your backend service 28, 29.
3. The 15-Minute Stack: You transition smoothly by asking, "If today was valuable, do you mind if I just tell you a little bit more about what we do?" 30, 31. You then execute a rapid, 15-minute stack and close 30, 31. You offer to fully implement the precise systems they just spent two days learning about, instantly transitioning them from an event attendee to a $90K+ Veluse Agency partner.
