

VELUSE AGENCY STANDARD OPERATING PROCEDURE (SOP)
DEPARTMENT: Sales & Revenue Strategy
SUBJECT: The Identity Shift Framework (Identity-Based Selling)
PURPOSE: To train Veluse Agency consultants on how to fundamentally transition a prospect from buying a commoditized service into buying a new, upgraded version of themselves. We do not sell AI infrastructure; we sell the identity of becoming a dominant, tech-forward Med Spa CEO.

PART 1: THE PHILOSOPHY OF IDENTITY (DOING IS BEING)

To successfully execute an identity shift in a prospect, our consultants must first understand the psychological reality of identity. Identity is a lie; we only describe people based on what they do 1, 2. Being and identities become descriptions of what we do, meaning "doing is being" 1, 3, 4.

If a struggling Med Spa owner wants to be somehow different, they have to do different things, and only afterwards will people describe them based on the actions they take 1, 2. The concept of "be, do, have" is flawed; you must simply do, because by doing, you be, and by doing, you get 3, 4. Therefore, our sales process must challenge the prospect to take the immediate action (purchasing our infrastructure) that forces them into the identity of the successful CEO they wish to become.

PART 2: FACILITATING THE "IDENTITY SHIFT" IN THE CLOSE

When a prospect hesitates on price or fit, they are usually clinging to the safety of their current, struggling reality. To break this, we must force a confrontation between their old self and their desired future self using the "New Identity, New Priorities" framework 5-7.

1. The "Vote With Your Dollars" Principle We must remind the prospect that we vote with our dollars about the things that we care about, and if you show me what someone is spending their money and their time on, I can tell you what their future is 5-7.

2. Drawing the Line in the Sand During the close, consultants must explicitly lay out the dichotomy of the prospect's choices. You explain to the clinic owner that they have had priorities aligned with their old identity—the version of them that struggles, lacks leads, and spends time on things they shouldn't 8-10. Then, you introduce the version of themselves they want to be 8-10.

Execution Script: "Right now we can draw the line in the sand and be like, do you want to keep walking down the road that you have been walking, and if you don't, then you have to step into a new identity" 8-10.

3. Enforcing New Priorities You must firmly state that with that new identity comes new priorities, because people who want to be rich spend money on themselves, their education, and investing in their skill sets 8-10. To align their identity with those who have already achieved Med Spa dominance, they must step into the identity they want to be today by making the investment 8-10.

4. The Pain of Change If they still resist, you must challenge them on their tolerance for their current suffering. You must ask the person if their current situation is more painful than the change they will have to go through to get to where they want to go 11-13. If they want a different outcome, you must remind them that they cannot keep doing what they are doing; they have to change the variables to change the outcome 14, 15.

PART 3: SELLING THE NEW VERSION OF THE PROSPECT

The transition from selling a product (AI software) to selling a new version of the prospect requires entirely abandoning feature-based pitching.

- Sell the Vacation, Not the Plane Flight: The prospect does not care about the features of the service; they care about where they are going to go and what life is going to be like afterwards 16-18.
- Avoid the "Plane Flight" Trap: Do not talk about the CRM pipelines, the API integrations, the AI prompting, or the tech support 16, 18. That is the equivalent of selling the TSA lines, the turbulence, and the baggage claim 16, 18.
- Pitch the "Vacation": You pitch the experience of what getting more sales actually means, describing the emotions they will experience, such as the overwhelm of having too many phones ring and not enough salespeople 19, 20. You describe what it is like to see their clinic full, to have a line around the corner, and to have the "good problems" of needing to reorganize their facility to make room for more patients 21, 22.

PART 4: POST-PURCHASE IDENTITY INTEGRATION (THE UPSELL)

The identity shift does not end when the credit card is charged; it actually creates a hyper-buying window.

Most businesses have some sort of shift that happens in someone's identity when they make a purchase, where they declare, "I'm an investor now," "I'm a marketer now," or "I'm a fitness person now" 23, 24. When a Med Spa owner buys from Veluse Agency, they internally declare, "I am a high-level CEO now."

There are many other behaviors and products that naturally go along with that new identity 23, 24. Because they have stepped into this new persona, we must enable our customers to buy those supplementary things from us the moment they make that decision, as it is completely congruent with the expectations we just set 25, 26. If we promised to help them become an elite, scaled CEO, but only sell them a single software tool, we show that we did not truly believe in their new identity 25, 26. By immediately offering them the next logical step (e.g., advanced staff sales training or an executive mastermind), we validate their new identity and maximize our Lifetime Gross Profit.
