

VELUSE AGENCY STANDARD OPERATING PROCEDURE (SOP) DEPARTMENT: Sales & Revenue Strategy SUBJECT: The Ethical Sales Guardrails & Disqualification Protocol PURPOSE: To establish Veluse Agency's absolute ethical boundaries for high-ticket acquisition. We do not compromise our reputation for short-term revenue. Our consultants must operate as elite advisors to our Med Spa clients, executing sales with uncompromising integrity, prioritizing the prospect's actual needs, and ruthlessly disqualifying bad fits.

PART 1: THE ETHICAL BOUNDARIES OF SELLING (THE "RED FLAG" AVOIDANCE)

Veluse Agency distances itself entirely from the sleazy, thin-content marketing tactics that plague the agency space 1. Our authority and enterprise value are built on prestige and ethical leverage 2, 3. We strictly enforce the following guardrails:

1. The "Information Symmetry" Rule: Sales is an education process and a transference of conviction over a bridge of trust 4, 5. The ultimate ethical test is this: If the Med Spa owner knew absolutely everything that you know about our AI infrastructure, they should still make the decision to buy 4, 5. If they knew everything you knew and would not buy, yet you manipulate them into purchasing anyway, you have deceived them, making you an unethical salesperson 4, 5.

2. State the Facts and Tell the Truth: We do not use fabricated conversations, fake scarcity scripts, or straight-up lies to create an aura of authority 6, 7. The foundation of our sales communication is to simply state the facts and tell the truth 8, 9. If a prospect is qualified, we have an ethical obligation to state the facts and help them make a decision, but we never use deception to earn 8, 9. A legitimate business transaction is a voluntary exchange of money for services where both people walk away saying thank you 9.

3. Morals Over Money: We do not put money above honor and morals 10. We do not associate our brand with questionable, sleazy operators, nor do we push unnecessary services onto Med Spas just to extract higher lifetime value 11, 12. Our reputation is our primary asset; sacrificing it for a quick high-ticket close is a structural failure 11.

PART 2: "CLOSING AS COACHING" VS. "CLOSING AS COMBAT"

Amateur closers view sales as a battle they must win. At Veluse Agency, we recognize that selling properly is actually the very first step in a coaching relationship 13, 14.

Closing as Combat (The Failure Paradigm): If you treat the sale as a combat zone where you must beat the prospect into submission, you will fail 15, 16. You never win a sale by winning an argument 17, 18. If you prove the Med Spa owner wrong and win the logical debate, they will feel insulted, you will destroy rapport, and you will lose the deal 18, 19.

Closing as Coaching (The Veluse Standard): Closing is a dance, not a fight; it is seduction, not coercion 15, 16. We operate using the following mental frameworks:

- The "Help Them Decide" Mandate: We are not here to force them to buy; we are here to help them make a high-stakes decision to help themselves 20-22. Sometimes, the absolute best and right decision for them is not to buy from us, and we must be genuinely happy to help them reach that conclusion 23, 24.
- The Ultimate Advantage: The person who cares the most about the prospect wins the sale 25, 26. If you genuinely care more about the Med Spa owner's well-being than they do, you will ask the hard questions required to pierce their limiting beliefs and secure their transformation 25, 26.

- Selling from the Back Foot: We maintain absolute detachment from the monetary outcome 27. We act as spirit guides, letting our strategic questions guide the conversation so the prospect naturally concludes they need our infrastructure 28.

PART 3: PROTOCOL FOR "FIRING" A PROSPECT

We do not take money from just anyone, and we do not make promises to the moon 29. We only sell to qualified Med Spas who meet our strict BANT criteria (Budget, Authority, Need, Timing) 30, 31. If a prospect is not a fit, or if they are highly combative, our consultants are required to explicitly "fire" them during the discovery call.

Step 1: Confrontational Qualification Do not passively accept weak answers. Hit the prospect hard with confrontational questions to gauge their true commitment level 32. Ask them directly: "Are you willing to change the way you do X? Are you willing to stop doing Y?" 32. If they are not committed to doing the work, weed them out 32.

Step 2: Reversing the Pitch ("Don't Sell Me On Your Problem") If a prospect continuously argues why their market is too tough, why their clinic can't grow, or why they cannot afford the investment, do not try to convince them otherwise. Agree with them 33, 34.

- Execution: "You know what, it sounds like you are completely committed to your current situation. If you don't want to grow, then don't let me sell you. I think it is a good idea for you not to do this" 33, 35.

Step 3: The Graceful Ejection When you determine they are unqualified or too risky, proactively turn them down.

- Execution: Tell them, "Based on what you've told me, I don't think our infrastructure is the right fit for you right now, and I don't want to take your money if I can't guarantee a massive return."
- The Result: Learning to turn away bad prospects makes you an infinitely more powerful closer 35. By rejecting unqualified leads, you protect the agency from structural churn, and you approach your remaining qualified sales calls with absolute, unshakable conviction 35, 36.
