

VELUSE AGENCY STANDARD OPERATING PROCEDURE (SOP)DEPARTMENT: Sales & Revenue StrategySUBJECT: The Psychology of Persuasion & InfluenceMODULE: The "Childlike Curiosity" Training ManualPURPOSE: To train Veluse Agency consultants to neutralize prospect hostility, bypass defensive smoke screens, and maintain absolute frame control during high-ticket Med Spa sales. We achieve this not through aggressive coercion, but through strategic, disarming inquiry.

PART 1: THE "CHILDLIKE CURIOSITY" MINDSET

In high-ticket sales, prospects inherently expect a salesperson to be combative and argumentative the moment they present an objection 1. If you meet their resistance with aggressive counter-arguments, both parties lose, and you lose the sale 2, 3.

To bypass this defense mechanism, our consultants must adopt a frame of "Childlike Curiosity." This means approaching every objection not as an attack to be defeated, but as a fascinating puzzle to be understood 4, 5. When a Med Spa owner says, "My business partner will never approve this," instead of arguing that the partner is wrong, a consultant using childlike curiosity responds with a non-threatening, inquisitive tone: "Huh... that's weird. Why wouldn't they?" 5. This completely disarms the prospect because it is impossible to be angry at someone who is genuinely curious and seeking to understand their perspective 6, 7.

PART 2: "SEEK TO UNDERSTAND, NOT TO ARGUE" PROTOCOL

The golden rule of Veluse Agency closing is: You never win a sale by winning an argument 2, 8, 9.

If you attempt to prove the prospect wrong, you might win the logical debate, but you will permanently damage rapport and lose their business 2, 3. The "Seek to Understand, Not to Argue" protocol mandates that we treat closing as a dance, not a fight 10, 11.

- The Back-Foot Stance: We do not lean in aggressively to beat the prospect into submission; we sell from our "back foot" 10. We maintain a posture of relaxed authority, communicating that we genuinely want to help them make the best decision for their clinic, even if that means not buying 10, 12, 13.
- Making Them Right: You become rich by making the prospect right, not by proving yourself right 14. People believe almost nothing of what a salesperson says, but they believe everything that they say themselves 15, 16. By asking curious questions, we guide the prospect to logically dismantle their own excuses without ever having to correct them ourselves 15, 17.

PART 3: HANDLING MICRO-REJECTIONS & SMOKE SCREENS

(Note: The specific term "Micro-rejection technique" is not found within the provided Hormozi database. However, the methodology for handling small, frequent rejections and stalls is deeply detailed through his "Be Like Smoke" and objection-looping frameworks. I have extracted these exact tactics below to fulfill the operational intent of your request.)

When a prospect throws out minor rejections, stalls, or "smoke screens" (e.g., "I just wanted to find out more information" or "I don't like this one specific feature"), beginners usually panic and try to answer the objection directly 18-20.

Instead, Veluse consultants must "Be Like Smoke" 2, 3. When you make declarative statements, you give the prospect a target to punch; if you answer every micro-rejection with another question, there is nothing for them to grab onto 16, 21.

- The Loop: If they reject a minor point, we do not fight it. We simply resolve the isolated concern and ask for the sale again 22, 23.
- The Isolation Play: If a Med Spa owner rejects a specific part of the AI infrastructure, use childlike curiosity to ask: "If the program didn't have that one thing you just mentioned, would you do it?" 24. If they say yes, you have successfully isolated the micro-rejection, removed it from the table, and cleared the path to close 24.

PART 4: THE 5-STEP "HIGH-PRESSURE" FRAME MAINTENANCE CHECKLIST

The most critical moment in a sale occurs immediately after you drop the price and the prospect gives their first major objection. Adrenaline spikes, fight-or-flight kicks in, and untrained reps begin speaking too fast or sounding aggressive 25, 26.

To maintain the "Childlike Curiosity" frame under extreme pressure, consultants must memorize and execute this 5-step behavioral checklist:

1. Control Your Physiology (Breathe): When adrenaline hits, your natural instinct is to hyperventilate and speed up your speech 25, 26. You must consciously slow down your breathing to prevent sounding nervous or combative 25.
2. Deploy the Physical Cue (The Head Tilt): When the objection lands, physically tilt your head to the side or upward. This is a universally non-threatening, inquisitive body language cue that naturally softens your vocal tone 7, 27, 28.
3. The "Huh" Pause: Start your response by simply saying, "Huh..." and pausing for two to three seconds 7. This buys you crucial time to process the objection, prevents a knee-jerk defensive reaction, and demonstrates that you are genuinely pondering their statement 7.
4. Acknowledge & Validate: Use the first step of the AAA Framework to validate their reality without agreeing with their conclusion. State: "That's really interesting. I totally understand why you'd feel that way..." 7, 29, 30. This removes all combativeness from the space.
5. Ask the Discovery Question: Shift the burden of explanation back onto the prospect by asking a clarifying question. State: "Tell me more about that," or "What are you most afraid of having happen?" 7, 10, 31. The person asking the questions retains absolute control of the frame 32, 33.
